a new shelter for San Francisco

Building a sustainable future
for the City's homeless, injured, lost, and abandoned domestic and wild animals.

San Francisco Animal Care & Control's current facility at 1200 15th Street was originally built as a warehouse in 1931 and renovated into an animal shelter in 1989. Since then, the standards for animal care and the number of animals we serve have changed dramatically, leaving our current facility woefully inadequate.

THE PLAN

It's time to leave our seismically unsound, cramped, and unsafe building. We need a new home. The lack of seismic safety in our shelter endangers the animals in our care and the people who care for them. The building could crumble in an earthquake, and we would not be able to fulfill our duty as first responders in a disaster.

Our new shelter will be a state-of-the-art, retrofitted historic building with modernized facilities. Constructed in 1893 and rich in San Francisco history, the building located on the northeast corner of Bryant and Alameda Streets is one of the city's few remaining unreinforced masonry buildings of its time, and it will be preserved for all San Franciscans to visit and enjoy. It will allow us to follow best practices in disease, noise, and odor control, thereby improving the overall well-being and adoptability of the animals in our care. In addition, the new shelter will:

- Meet seismic code to operate in emergencies
- Nearly double in size and space
- Increase the number of play yards for dogs and small animals from one to four
- Offer plenty of indoor room for kittens and cats
- Include conference rooms and open spaces for meetings, trainings, and children's camps
- Have improved ventilation and air-conditioning systems that will enable us to provide enclosed isolation rooms for animals with contagious illnesses

state of the art, thereby improving the overall well-being and adoptability of our animals.

exceptional service

San Francisco Animal Care & Control (SFACC) is the City's only open-door animal shelter. We keep our community safe and respond to all reports of animal abuse, neglect, and cruelty. We accept all animals regardless of species, medical condition, or behavior. We reunite animals with their owners, rehome adoptable animals, and assist wildlife. Our extensive programs and services to animals and people in our community include:

- Pet adoptions
- Care for animals of San Francisco residents in emergency situations
- SAFE Pets program for pets of domestic violence victims
- Lost & found pet services
- Animal rescue services
- Animal welfare inspections
- Educational services
- Foster care

THE FUTURE OF ANIMAL CARE & CONTROL

programs and services

Our new building will allow us to work better and more efficiently to rescue, rehabilitate, and reunite animals with their guardians or find them new homes. Friends of San Francisco Animal Care & Control is a 501(c)(3) nonprofit that supports additional critical programs that are not funded by tax-payer dollars. These programs would not exist without the contributions of our generous donors. Our adoption partners expand our capacity to rescue animals by accepting animals from us and rehabilitating, fostering, and finding them forever homes or releasing them back to the wild.

The perpetuity of these additional programs is crucial to our ability to save animals' lives and maintain the level of excellence our City deserves.

400

The City of San Francisco has committed over $70 million to retrofitting the building and inside spaces for our new and improved, modernized animal shelter. However, the budgeted amount is not enough to cover all the costs needed to make the space the world-class animal shelter that San Franciscans deserve. We are turning to the generosity of the San Francisco community to help raise the final $4.3 million that is needed to complete the project and continue to fund the critical programs SFACC offers.

Your contribution is not only a symbol of the community's passion for the animals and people of San Francisco, but it is also an essential part of both the completion of the building and SFACC's ongoing programs. Your donation will help us to do whatever it takes to care for these animals—both domestic and wild. Our goal is to create a safe environment for all animals in San Francisco and deliver animal welfare programs that educate and serve our community.
